- The law of tort is a branch of the private (civil) law
- A tort is a "civil wrong", which unlike a crime which is a wrong committed against the state, is a wrong committed against an individual
- Liability in tort comes from either a breach of a duty owed by members of society towards each other (for example, all road users owe other road users a duty of care) or the infringement of a right of another person (for example, everyone has the right to privacy and therefore, a ...
