It is this possessive individualism that Tories find problematic and that places them, at times, on the political left—hence Red Tory. The modern liberal addiction to possessions/property and protection of such secondary goods does much to fragment and isolate people from one another into affluent and indulgent bourgeois ghettos.

Red Tory Manifesto — George Grant Society

In practice it seems that a red Tory is just someone who is, on net, between the Liberal and Conservative parties. which can take many forms. Economically left leaning people (pro-union especially) who have the vague sense that they are "harder" than most Liberals manifesting in tough on crime, and pro-military positions may use the term.

Boris's Red Tory Victory | Phillip Blond | First Things

Red Tory is written in a way that is designed to leave the reader in no doubt about the erudition of its author. In a typical paragraph, which condenses criticism of Mill, Keynes and Marx into a single sentence, Blond proclaims that "capitalism will engender endless new needs".
