Richard of St. Victor: On the Trinity1 Book One Translated by Jonathan Couser Chapter I 5 That we apprehend the knowledge of things in a threefold manner: by experience, by reasoning, [and] by believing. If we wish to ascend to the knowledge of sublime things by sagacity of thought, we must know what ways we are accustomed to apprehend the knowledge of things. Accordingly, unless I am mistaken, we apprehend the knowledge of things in a threefold manner. For we prove ...

Richard of St. Victor 9 – Perfect Love Requires Three Persons (Scott) July 28, 2009 July 28, 2009; Three is perfection, four is redundant. (Un)Fortunately, one of these people gets knocked-off. In this post I'd like to focus on Richard's initial argument for why God must be a Trinity. He has argued for two divine persons, and now adds a further line of argument to show that God is in fact a Trinity and not a Binity of persons. Why must God be a Trinity?
