'the baltimore waltz' has been one of my favourite plays from the first time i read it. this compilation has a wonderful variety and shows what range vogel has as a writer. 'and baby makes seven' and 'the oldest profession' are both a riot o laughs. 'hot'n'throbbing' is a disturbing yet much needed look at domestic violence.

Characters & Themes: Paula Vogel's The Baltimore Waltz

The Baltimore Waltz is a 1990 play by American playwright Paula Vogel. A satire of the prejudices that surrounded the AIDS crisis of the 1980s, the play follows American schoolteacher Anna as she learns that she is dying of "Acquired Toilet Disease," and embarks on a sex-fuelled trip around Europe with her brother, Carl, who still hopes that a cure will be found.

Like The Normal Heart, Paula Vogel's The Baltimore Waltz was written and first performed in a less hopeful, extremely painful time for those with friends or family who had received the dreaded diagnosis. Like Kramer's play, Vogel's is also included in the current flood of stage and film stories looking back at the worst days of the crisis, in a revival by Retro Productions.

Review: Paula Vogel's comedy The Baltimore Waltz - DC ...

Baltimore Waltz is a memory play and a conundrum I am always happy to revisit. And Baby Makes Seven is perhaps the funniest play about building a family I can imagine. Hot'N'Thrbbing is a challenge of another sort, and the rest of the plays in this volume don't stand to me as much as the aforementioned ones, but ...
