There's an absolute wall of death metal density to unpack. Almost every track is an assiduous assault of cosmic horror and there's little to no useless bulk on this album -- it's so compact, so air tight, and so focused on delivering an Alien-inspired listening experience.

Champions that may have stood atop of their field at one point but one way or another they fall out of favor in to obscurity. I mean, I don't really ever pay attention to these champs because they have nothing noteworthy to talk about, sure there mains are pretty insane, but they just are forgotten.
